The Slaves of Adams County

Abstract
This compilation of named slaves surely does not represent anything near the total number who toiled in the county; without a doubt many are now irretrievable. Of those who can be isolated, a large number may be identified to some extent by age or sex or name of owner, or by a combination of those definers. This list, however, comprises only those slaves whose names are recorded. [excerpt]

List D: The Slaves

This compilation of named slaves surely does not represent anything near the total number who toiled in the county; without a doubt many are now irretrievable. Of those who can be isolated, a large number may be identified to some extent by age or sex or name of owner, or by a combination of those definers. This list, however, comprises only those slaves whose names are recorded.

Sources for the huge majority found have been three: the slave register (List C); the Pennsylvania septennial censuses of 1800, '07, '14, and '21; and individual estate documents, limited here to wills and inventories of personal property. A very few names are from newspaper accounts, deeds, or federal census records.

When possible, each slave is tied to his/her owner, whose name and place of residence appear first, followed by slave name (spelled as found), sex, age, year and source of information, plus anything else uncovered which adds to the identification. Those slaves whose owners are not named, with the exception of the slaveholders whose surnames are known to begin with A, are grouped under the letter U (owner unknown).

Hatton, Leonard  Hunt;  Heek/Keck m 1815 INV [Almost certainly, this is Hack, husband of Patience immediately below.]

Patience f 1815 INV [Two Gettysburg newspapers, the Compiler of December 27, 1858, and the Sentinel of January 3, 1859, reported the death on the previous November 4 of Patience Hack of York Springs, at the age of nearly 100 years. Known as "Old Tacey," she was perhaps the last slave in the county and perhaps the last in the state. She was the last of a family of slaves formerly owned by Leonard Hatter (doubtless properly Hatton), her husband and sons having died long before. She had last been cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stephens.

Patience appears in the 1850 federal census in the household of Phebby Pearson of York Springs. There she is called Patience Sibb, aged 85, black, slave. Quite likely she is also the female slave, aged 55-100, in the household of Thomas Ross of Huntington township, as seen in the 1840 census.

The birth year of Patience may be estimated with some degree of assurance. Hatton and then his widow were taxed for at least one slave often between 1779 and 1819. Tax and census records place the birth of the person who probably was Patience at roughly 1754-1765. The 1807 septennial census for Huntington township, although it does not name slave owners, includes only a man aged 62 and a woman aged 47 "held as servants." They are here taken to be Patience and her husband, she born about 1760.

Tying Patience Hack to Leonard Hatton is supported by the fact that Hatton's daughter Margaret married Thomas Stephens. He and Phoebe ("Phebby") Pearson are not counted as slaveholders in this work, their roles considered actually to have been caregivers.

In 1854 Plim, known also as Benjamin Craig, petitioned the court to appoint a trustee to replace the original holder of his bequest, who was by then deceased. Plim's age was given as "about 40" in the 1814 septennial census (see Wolford, Peter and U: Plim). Federal censuses show Blim Craig, 36-55, MP, in 1830; Benjamin Plim, 58, Gett, in 1850; Benjamin Craig, 80, Cum, in 1860. The Compiler of November 24, 1869, reported the death of Benjamin Craig of Franklin township, reputedly aged 106 years and 9 months.]

Addenda

The following items were discovered too late to appear in the foregoing lists.

Evidence that slaves were indeed registered prior to 1800 can be seen on a slip of paper, undated but likely in the handwriting of a family member, in the Chamberlain Family file at the Adams County Historical Society. Recorded are the names and registration dates of the slaves of two Chamberlain individuals; one list also shows the slaves' ages. (For comparison, see both Chamberlains, List D.)

In separate transactions, both on April 9, 1817, recorded in Deed Book H, pp. 113 and 114, James McSherry, Esq., of Germany township emancipated slaves Jean Bolton, aged about 38 years, and William Exaverias, also aged about 38 years and game in one leg. (See McSherry, James, List D.)

On January 23, 1866, the Sentinel reported the death on that January 15 of Hetty, aged 86 years and 3 months, "a relict of Pennsylvania slavery," at the residence of J.R. Henry, Abbottstown.

In the 1850 census for Berwick Town (Abbottstown) appear Joseph R. Henry, 60, druggist; Samuel, 22; Mary, 59; Charlotte, 40; and Hett, 70. Hett is designated as black, but not as a slave. The 1860 census for Abbottstown has not survived. Nevertheless, Hetty's given age in the two instances shown do agree with her birth having occurred just before the 1780 abolition act. Henry is never listed as a slaveholder.

As can be seen in Deed Book H, p. 217, on January 6, 1818, Samuel Sloan of Adams county manumitted "my Negro Servant names Charles." Sloan was long-time deputy surveyor for Adams county, appointed for terms beginning in 1800, 1815, 1818, 1824, and 1827; he lived in Franklin and Cumberland townships. (See Sloan, Samuel, Lists A and D.)

According to the Sentinel of September 2, 1903, Miss Maria Cowen, aged 94 years, died the previous Friday [August 28]. Known as Aunt Maria, in earlier times she had been a slave. Censuses of 1850 and 1880 agree with her obituary that she was born about 1809. The latter census also leaves blank the spaces for recording the birthplaces of her parents, perhaps a clue that her mother at least was indeed a slave.

No Maria born in 1808 or 1809 appears in the Adams County Slave Register, so it is likely that she was born in another Pennsylvania county. Nevertheless, by 1837 at the latest, she would have attained freedom.

Among the possessions of the Adams County Historical Society is the 1831 manumission of a slave named Clem Johnson by Francis Scott Key, composer of our national anthem, who at the time was an attorney in Washington, D.C. Apparently unable under District law to free Johnson there, Key brought him to Gettysburg precisely for that purpose. What became of Clem Johnson thereafter is not known.

On file at the Adams County Historical Society is a copy of a 1790 bill of sale of "Nagro wench" Nance and her daughter Heneretta by Patrick McSherry to Thomas Laurimore (Larimer). McSherry laid out the town named for him, although by the time of this transaction he lived in Germany.
township; Larimer lived in Mt. Joy township.

Copies of the estate documents of James Ewing of Franklin township, who died in 1786, are held at the Adams County Historical Society. They show that by his will, signed on that March 12, Ewing ordered much of his personal property to be sold. An inventory of his property, dated April 18, 1786, included "one Negro Man" and "one Negro Woman," together valued at £137-10-0. The final account of the estate, submitted August 30, 1799, reveals that the executors had to allow £145-10-0 from the estate to the buyers of "a Negro Man & Woman Sold at Vendue & who were not Registered according to law & in Consequence were set free." That was in strict accordance with a stipulation of the 1780 gradual abolition act.
