Scope and Content Notes

This collection is made up of 28 letters sent to Andrew R. Kane of Philadelphia, PA from May 31-July 15, 1918 while he was serving with the 112th Infantry, Company C in France. They were sent by the women in his family: his mother, two sisters, his sister-in-law, and girlfriend. His younger sister, Frances, and girlfriend, Marie wrote most often. Letters reference family and friends in Philadelphia, their pride in Andrew’s service, and their worries about his safety. They express patriotic and religious sentiments. Letters from Andrew’s mother, Mary, contain the most spelling and grammatical errors and letters from his sister-in-law, Margaret have the most challenging handwriting.

Letters written by Andrew’s sister, Frances, contain news of friends and social gatherings as do letters from another sister, Nanie [Elizabeth?]. Letters from his girlfriend, Marie express how much she misses Andrew and cautions about the allure of French women. Some letters touch on home front topics like sugar and meat rationing, censorship of mail, and a feeling of emptiness in the city of Philadelphia. Several letters refer to family members seeing Andrew’s name or photograph in the newspaper and one letter included a clipping, which is not part of this collection. These mentions in the newspaper were not located upon an internet search.
Letters written to and from Andrew could take up to a month to reach him and his family members. Letters written by Andrew seem to have arrived in bundles, several at a time. His sisters and girlfriend comment on how interesting they are, but do not reference any specific names or locations.
