MS-167: Hiram Parker Jr. Letters

Description

There are 52 letters total in the collection spanning from 1862-1874. The bulk of the letters are written by Hiram most of which are to his father, mother Mary Sparks. However, there are a couple to another member of the Sparks family and a few other friends. Six are letters written to Hiram from his friends and the collection also includes 12 handwritten and printed reports on the construction of the gunboat Tacony. Hiram's letters are very detailed (some of his letters are over a dozen pages), and he wrote to people very often even adding on to some letters after he originally finished writing them. Many of the letters still have their original envelopes with them.

Biography

Hiram Parker, Jr. was born on October 4, 1841 in Pottsville, PA, where he was educated until he took an apprenticeship as a machinist for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad shops. In 1861, he enlisted in the Navy as an assistant engineer. For a year, he was assigned to the West Gulf Squadron on the gunboat Kanawha then reassigned to the North Atlantic Squadron on the gunboat Louisiana. He completed his Civil War service on the gunboat Tacony, which helped with both Union attacks on Fort Fisher in December 1864 and again in January 1865. After the Civil War ended he spent three years with the South Pacific Squadron and traveled along the coast of South America. There he was first assistant engineer on the Lancaster, but then moved to chief engineer on the Powhattan. During his time on the South Pacific Squadron he saw the Cuban filibustering issues that arose after the Civil War and in his last year of service, spent some time on shore duty in South America. His total service time spanned 13 years (1861-1874) and when he returned to Pottsville, he came to own one of first businesses to manufacture the steam boiler, Sparks and Parker. In 1873, he married the daughter, Mary E. Sparks, of his business partner. They had three children Jabes, Emily, and Jessie before Mary passed away in 1883. Hiram remarried in 1885 to Mary's sister Julia Sparks, they did not have any children. Hiram Parker Jr died on February 17th, 1918 at the age of 76 from lobar pneumonia and was buried in Charles Baber cemetery in Pottsville, PA.

Scope and Content Notes

There are 52 letters total in the collection spanning from 1862-1874. The bulk of the letters are written by Hiram most of which are to his father, mother Mary Sparks. However, there are a couple to another member of the Sparks family and a few other friends. Six are letters written to Hiram from his friends and the collection also includes 12 handwritten and printed reports on the construction of the gunboat Tacony. Hiram's letters are very detailed (some of his letters are over a dozen pages), and he wrote to people very often even adding on to some letters after he originally finished writing them. Many of the letters still have their original envelopes with them.

During his Civil War service Hiram recounts rebel activity in North Carolina including the evacuation and burning of Washington, NC by the Union soldiers in April 1864 after Confederate forces attacked, however most of his letters are post war and he goes into detail of his travels with the South Pacific Squadron on the South American coast. He gives accounts of life on the boats, the cities he visits (including Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; the Falkland Islands; Valparaiso, Chile; and Montevideo, Uruguay), and observations on the culture, among other things the Russian Grand Duke Alexei arriving in Brazil with his fleet in 1872, the Patagonian Indians, and a Chilean Penal Settlement.

There is also a printed broadside with the services, including ship maintenance and supplies such as food, at Stanley Harbor in the Falkland Islands and a hand drawn floor plan of part of a ship with a manuscript note on the back.
