Fearless: Allan Kawala

Allan I. Kawala

Gettysburg College

Follow this and additional works at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge

Part of the Civic and Community Engagement Commons, and the Politics and Social Change Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge/151

This is the author's version of the work. This publication appears in Gettysburg College's institutional repository by permission of the copyright owner for personal use, not for redistribution. Cupola permanent link: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge/151

This open access blog post is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.
Fearless: Allan Kawala

Abstract
Allan Kawala ’13 does not stand on the sidelines. He is an agent of change and is a leader at Gettysburg College and in his home country of Malawi. He has dedicated his life to making social change a reality.

Keywords
Surge, Surge Gettysburg, Gettysburg College, Center for Public Service, public service, community service, Malawi, social justice

Disciplines
Civic and Community Engagement | Politics and Social Change | Sociology

Comments
Surge is a student blog at Gettysburg College where systemic issues of justice matter. Posts are originally published at surgegettysburg.wordpress.com Through stories and reflection, these blog entries relate personal experiences to larger issues of equity, demonstrating that –isms are structural problems, not actions defined by individual prejudice. We intend to popularize justice, helping each other to recognize our biases and unlearn the untruths.

This blog post is available at The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge/151
FEARLESS: ALLAN KAWALA

April 5, 2013

Fearless Friday celebrates individuals, groups, or events that promote change or challenge injustice.

Allan Kawala ‘13 does not stand on the sidelines. He is an agent of change and is a leader at Gettysburg College and in his home country of Malawi. He has dedicated his life to making social change a reality. Here is his message to you:

“Sometimes, I get frustrated with the minimal progress towards social justice and I just wish to give up the fight. However, I think about what our society would be like today if the people before did that. Fighting against social injustice and fighting for a just society transcend my personal experiences; it’s about honoring those whose legacy made my experiences better today, and carrying on with the fight to create better experiences for my children, grandchildren, and unborn generations.

Social change doesn’t come easily. But it starts with you. Acknowledge your privilege. Figure out the messages you internalize. Refuse to be a bystander. Challenge stereotypes, prejudices, discrimination, and oppression in the face of adversity.

But remember, this isn’t just about you.

It’s also about those who came before you can will come after. Let’s not have our children experience the same racial abuse because we have not acted.”
Need more inspiration? Check out the The Peace Project Song, created and recorded by an advocacy group that Allan Kawala ’13 founded. It’s been played by radio stations in more than 30 African countries!

And a shout out to Pete Barrett ’15 for his awesome blog post about the need to Stand Up to create change!

http://surgegettysburg.wordpress.com/2013/04/05/fearless-allan-kawala/