3-8-2013

Fearless: Steph Adamczak

Stephanie K. Adamczak
Gettysburg College

Follow this and additional works at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge

Part of the Civic and Community Engagement Commons, Natural Resources and Conservation Commons, and the Oil, Gas, and Energy Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge/138

This is the author's version of the work. This publication appears in Gettysburg College's institutional repository by permission of the copyright owner for personal use, not for redistribution. Cupola permanent link: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/surge/138

This open access blog post is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.
Fearless: Steph Adamczak

Abstract
Steph Adamczak ’15 has been shaking things up on campus by having some fearless conversations about the current investments Gettysburg College is making in fossil fuels. Steph hopes that by opening these important conversations, the college will consider divesting from these specific investments, especially with increased support from the Gettysburg College student body. [excerpt]

Keywords
Surge, Surge Gettysburg, Gettysburg College, Center for Public Service, fossil fuels

Disciplines
Civic and Community Engagement | Environmental Sciences | Natural Resources and Conservation | Oil, Gas, and Energy | Sociology

Comments
Surge is a student blog at Gettysburg College where systemic issues of justice matter. Posts are originally published at surgetyssburg.wordpress.com Through stories and reflection, these blog entries relate personal experiences to larger issues of equity, demonstrating that –isms are structural problems, not actions defined by individual prejudice. We intend to popularize justice, helping each other to recognize our biases and unlearn the untruths.
Steph Adamczak ’15 has been shaking things up on campus by having some fearless conversations about the current investments Gettysburg College is making in fossil fuels. Steph hopes that by opening these important conversations, the college will consider divesting from these specific investments, especially with increased support from the Gettysburg College student body. “We want to let the Board of Trustees know that this is something that the campus is working towards and that we’re very excited about this endeavor. It is part of a larger national movement for campuses to go fossil free,” Steph said of the campaign. Petitions will be found around campus after spring break that students can sign to show their support of this project.
Are you interested in getting involved? Do you want to know more about the campaign or carry petitions around campus? Contact Steph at adamst03@gettysburg.edu.

And a shout out to the women of Alpha Delta Pi for their efforts with the “Spread the Word to End the Word” Campaign!

http://surgegettysburg.wordpress.com/2013/03/08/fearless-steph-adamczak/