2-2014

Bill In Hell

Collin C. Furth '14, Gettysburg College

Follow this and additional works at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/student_scholarship

Part of the Poetry Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/student_scholarship/203

This is the author's version of the work. This publication appears in Gettysburg College's institutional repository by permission of the copyright owner for personal use, not for redistribution. Cupola permanent link: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/student_scholarship/203

This open access creative writing is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.
Bill In Hell

Authors
Collin C. Furth ’14, Gettysburg College

Keywords
creative writing, poetry, laughter, happiness, love

Abstract
A humorous look at the truth of relationships between varying roles of people and the supremacy love holds.

This creative writing is available at The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/student_scholarship/203
Bill In Hell

I swear I could laugh at almost anything.
A joke, a pun, or someone’s semi-sharpened wit,
But laughter’s a cheap high to which you can’t cling.

Yes, it is infectious, and most think it a quick wing to happiness, but that requires something stronger, a more clever fit.
I think I could laugh at almost anything.

Sweet whiskey’s heat works a while, but pales when tempering the heart’s rime, although, it helps a bit.
Laughter’s a cheap high to which you can’t cling, mustn’t cling.

The Blues soothes me some when I hear the pain others sing.
But their pain isn’t my pain, and Stevie Ray and I both know it.
I wish I could laugh at anything.

Friends are nice for a time, while they remain in your ring.
But they can’t do what she can do, finally reality hits.
Laughter’s a cheap high that never lessens the sting.

My last shot is love, that earthly reckoning,
which demands all that I have, my full heart’s full forfeit.
I refuse to laugh at anything.
Because I know what laughter costs, and to it I can’t cling.