

The Mercury

The Student Art & Literary Magazine of Gettysburg College

---

Year 2010

Article 28

---

1-1-2010

Baltimore Bullet

Lindsey A. Parker
Gettysburg College, parkli01@cnav.gettysburg.edu
Class of 2010

Follow this and additional works at: <http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury>

 Part of the Poetry Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

---

Parker, Lindsey A. (2015) "Baltimore Bullet," The Mercury: Year 2010, Article 28.
Available at: <http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury/vol2010/iss1/28>

This open access poetry is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.

---

Baltimore Bullet

Keywords

creative writing, poetry

Author Bio

Lindsey Parker is a senior Biology major and chemistry minor from Parkton, Maryland. On campus, she is the secretary for both Habitat for Humanity and the Pre-Health Professions club. Lindsey enjoys baking, watching movies, and drinking coffee of any variety. After graduation, she will be attending the Pennsylvania College of Optometry at Salus University in Philadelphia.

Lindsey Parker

Baltimore Bullet

A single shot provokes him and his body arches,
a keystone bridge spanning a chlorine sea.
The muted mumble of the water fills his ears,
protesting against the forceful slither of his body.
His head bobs with a percussionist's precision,
the pulse of adrenaline like the drumstick to a snare.

Straight-edge palms slice through the surface,
every stroke swatting numbers from the clock.
His fingers pursue the tiled expanse before him,
a hand searching for a light switch in the dark.
His eyes, freed from their suction-cup cages,
scan for his name stacked atop his competition.

Sliding his body from the water's grip,
the medium of his craft drips from waving arms.
Thousands of left hands meet their right,
cymbals colliding in an amateur ensemble.
He stands at attention between second and third,
a high-rise flanked by two five-story walkups.

A bend at the neck cues silence in the stands,
a starred and striped classic rising overhead.
Another gold trophy swings from cherry ribbon,
a pendulum escaped from a grandfather clock.
His right hand rests over his internal tympani,
his head angled toward the anthem in its final encore.

Tainted smoke fills champion lungs,
a single hit captured by a sidelong flash.
His quick gulp of earthy air plastered on glossy pages,
the wanted ad for a new generation.
An international eye watches his adolescent slip,
Hercules's graceless plummet from lofty Olympus.