1-1-2006

All-The-Time-Wine

Samuel P.C. Martin

Gettysburg College, martsa01@cnav.gettysburg.edu
Class of 2006

Follow this and additional works at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury

Part of the Poetry Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

Available at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury/vol2006/iss1/29

This open access poetry is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.
All-The-Time-Wine

Keywords
creative writing, poetry

Author Bio
Samuel Martin is a Senior English major and Music minor from the great midwestern city of Toledo, Ohio. He loves music, acting and Argentine beef, and plans on teaching middle-schoolers after graduating.

This poetry is available in The Mercury: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury/vol2006/iss1/29
All-the-time-wine

out come the bottles
the glass
the wine
the fruits of the table are just fine
it’s Sunday
it’s hot
it’s steamy about
the room that is nearest...the feathers they got
dance
dance around
show your stuff,
now that you have it
fill it up
and put it down
let’s see who’s running upside down
the man who sits
he smiles, he nods,
in his mind, he’s jivin’ his kind
(who...) is this man?
(what...) is in my wine?
Who’s feeling fine?...
Dance
The eyes are all cast down
As the sitting man looks around
But he says as he did before “You can make it with your drinks in hand, but you’ll never really touch the floor...”
climb
till your shoes are frozen feet among the sky where your bodies will need the wine
of who is fine
of life
of love
of fate
of will
of hope
to live
in a world
where we know not to dance on our own

with their minds,
and their souls,
the dancers stopped the music
to gaze
upon
the bottles that were empty
of wine
from who?
the man
who said,
"Fill the jars with water,
and let them drink my wine..."

For what it's worth
It's worth to say that
If they looked inside
And saw their glasses...
they were full of wine the whole time.