Christmas Morning

Brendan M. Sheehan
Gettysburg College, sheebr01@cnv.gettysburg.edu
Class of 2006

Follow this and additional works at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury

Part of the Poetry Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

Available at: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury/vol2006/iss1/19

This open access poetry is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.
Christmas Morning

Keywords
creative writing, poetry

Author Bio
Brendan Sheehan is a senior English major and writing minor from Binghamton, NY. He hopes to be working in either the news media, sports journalism or publishing industry next year. His favorite poets are Louis Simpson and Saul Williams and his favorite writers are Ernest Hemingway and Malcolm Gladwell.

This poetry is available in The Mercury: http://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury/vol2006/iss1/19
Christmas Morning

It was Christmas morning when simple no longer defined what we were.
It was that day
when “family” became “people.”
I never again harbored a selfish thought, we were all too busy praying for you.
“Fuck you!”
Like city folk in a simple town the words turned unaware heads. She thought the door was closed. He thought we were upstairs. People say that you can recall the day that your life changes. It was that day that it ended and began. Never could you revert, for people are not pawns, the game can’t be re-set. From simple words come complex men,
and things that were,
are simply that. Don’t dwell in thought, however impossible to resist. “I thought of that day,
years later, when I turned 16,” she said. “They were Gods to me and you.”
But like understanding the Holy Trinity, “simple” does not suffice. For simple people are strangers; and the people we’ve become are real. No complex thought, when in a child’s mind, can be explained in simple terms. “One day at a time,” they said. “And soon you will be just like you were.”
But is and was are the same as “were”
When you’re going on six years old, as people tend to forget. “Fuck You!”
and “We’re Through.” “Our Fault?” “Get that thought out of your head! It’ll all be normal again one day.”
But normal is not that simple.
You claim to barely remember it now. That you were far too young. “We’re fine people now.” But like a simple fact wrapped in complex thought, I always recall that day.