

8-2-2012

Installations, Check!

Emily A. Francisco
Gettysburg College

Follow this and additional works at: <https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/libinternblog>

 Part of the Library and Information Science Commons, and the Museum Studies Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

Francisco, Emily A., "Installations, Check!" (2012). Blogging the Library. 83.
<https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/libinternblog/83>

This open access blog post is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.

Installations, Check!

Abstract

I guess I assumed the most work was always put in BEFORE an exhibit went up (planning, researching, etc.), but I've realized now that it takes the same amount of time and effort to make an exhibit look good for the public as it does to plan it. Maybe it's because I'm both an artist and a perfectionist, but it took me at least a good hour on each exhibit before I was satisfied with the results. [excerpt]

Keywords

Musselman Library, Gettysburg College, Exhibits Intern, Exhibit Installation

Disciplines

Library and Information Science | Museum Studies

Comments

The Interns at Gettysburg College's Musselman Library captured their internship experiences since the spring of 2011. Over time the blog has featured Fortenbaugh, Smith, and Holley interns. They shared updates on semester long projects, responded to blogging prompts, and documented their individual intern experience.

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License

Blogging the Library

The Interns @ Gettysburg College's Musselman Library

Installations, Check!

Thursday, August 2, 2012

By: Emily Francisco '14

All the exhibit cases on the main floor are now officially filled! I still have some tweaking to do tomorrow (adding labels to the Civil War Sheet Music cases, for example) and I still need to put the number cubes in the Beran exhibit. I have to say, installing these exhibits has been a lot more challenging than I thought it would be.

I guess I assumed the most work was always put in BEFORE an exhibit went up (planning, researching, etc.), but I've realized now that it takes the same amount of time and effort to make an exhibit look good for the public as it does to plan it. Maybe it's because I'm both an artist and a perfectionist, but it took me at least a good hour on each exhibit before I was satisfied with the results.

Arranging items in cases is very different, too, from the wall installations we've done (for Kunstler & Gallon and the Fink paintings, for example). With the cases I had to consider things like background fabric (in terms of color and texture), whether I wanted reproductions to be set at angles or parallel with the case, and what kind of level at which I wanted to prop certain items. Balance, variety, contrast—I was forced to use all my visual skills as an Art History major (and Studio Art minor, for that matter)!

One day to go now. I can't believe it. Like I've said before, this summer has just flown by so fast...

Note: I also finished the rest of the exhibit webpages earlier this week. Check them out here: <http://www.gettysburg.edu/library/news/exhibits/welcome.dot>

Stay tuned for photos of the work I've done on these exhibits. My camera died today, and the library one was being used this afternoon, but I'll make sure to take some good ones tomorrow!

<http://bloggingthelibrary2012.blogspot.com/>