Ramparts

A left-wing magazine published from 1962-1975 that began as a secular publication aimed at liberal Catholics. Edited by David Horowitz, author of the recently published Radical Son (1998), telling of his journey from 1960's ultra-liberalism to the capitalist right. The magazine broke many new stories of the 1960s, worked closely with the leaders of the Black Panther movement, and was able to obtain sole US publishing rights to Che Guevara's diary from the Cuban government after his death in Bolivia. Some issues contain newspaper clippings, mostly related to the subject of that month's magazine. In keeping with the order of the magazine collection, the clippings and any miscellaneous ephemera are included with that particular issue. Subjects in the particular issue are listed after month, and any clippings found are listed by headline.
