Collection History

“The purpose of this account is to tell the story of Pennsylvania Hall, or Old Dorm, the earliest building to be erected on the campus of Gettysburg College.... The account is prompted by the fact that, after 131 years of use, first in a major way and then almost entirely, as a dormitory; the building underwent a complete interior renovation in 1969-1970 and was converted into an administrative center.” Thus begins Dr. Charles Glatfelter’s history of Pennsylvania Hall. The renovation of the building and the writing of its history were inexorably linked with the dedication of the building and the publication of the history both occurring in October 1970. Dr. C. Arnold Hanson, President of Gettysburg College 1961-1977 asked Dr. Glatfelter, Chairman of the College’s History Department and former Dean of the College, to write the history of the building as the first work in a planned Gettysburg College History Series. Professor Glatfelter believes that his efforts to research the history of this building led eventually to the establishment of the Gettysburg College Archives, housed in the Special Collection section of the College’s Library. For a fuller biography for Dr. Glatfelter see the finding aid for MS-059: The Papers of Charles Glatfelter (Class of 1946).
