

6-22-2019

Information Literacy at the Intersection of Scholarly Communications and Social Justice

Sarah Appedu
Gettysburg College

Follow this and additional works at: <https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/librarypubs>

 Part of the Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies Commons, Information Literacy Commons, Scholarly Communication Commons, and the Scholarly Publishing Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

---

Recommended Citation

Appedu, Sarah. "Information Literacy at the Intersection of Scholarly Communications and Social Justice." Poster presented at the ALA Annual Conference, Washington, D.C., June 22, 2019.

This open access conference material is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.

---

Information Literacy at the Intersection of Scholarly Communications and Social Justice

Abstract

Undergraduate outreach about Open Access (OA) lies at the intersection of information literacy and Scholarly Communications. Reframing undergraduates as current and future scholars allows us to treat them as agents within the Scholarly Communications network. Students who have mastered fundamental research skills are prepared to view them through the critical lens of Scholarly Communications in order to learn both how to locate resources and how those resources are created. This educational approach highlights the various barriers scholars can face in the research process, as well as provides an awareness of information privilege.

This poster will provide a model for how OA can be integrated into information literacy instruction by describing a one-shot session delivered to a 300-level Women and Gender Studies (WGS) course. For librarians looking to integrate OA into their teaching, WGS courses are a logical starting point. There is a moral imperative for WGS scholars to be aware of OA due to its corresponding values of equality, justice, and the belief in the capacity for all people to be participants in the scholarly conversation. Advanced WGS students are prepared to apply high level critical thinking to their own research practices. Situating their scholarly activity in the greater ecosystem of scholarly communications reveals how these students are agents within this system whose choices can have an impact on the larger network.

Keywords

scholarly communications, social justice, information literacy, women and gender studies, open access, publishing, Musselman Library, values

Disciplines

Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies | Information Literacy | Library and Information Science | Scholarly Communication | Scholarly Publishing

Comments

This poster was presented at the ALA Annual Conference in Washington, D.C. on June 22, 2019 as part of the ACRL Women and Gender Studies Section Research Poster Session and the WGSS General Membership Forum.

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License

Information Literacy at the Intersection of Scholarly Communications and Social Justice

Sarah Appedu, Gettysburg College

Premise

There is a moral imperative for Women, Gender, and Sexuality studies scholars to know about and participate in Open Access publishing.

Class Context

- WGS 300: Feminist Theory
- 13 undergraduates
- Juniors and seniors
- All WGS majors/minors
- 75-minute, one-shot presentation with participation

Learning Goals

- Define Scholarly Communications as a department and a network in order to contextualize your work within the larger system of academic publishing.
- Articulate how Open Access is one response to the inequality implicit in traditional academic publishing in order to apply the concept of information privilege to your own lives and practices.
- Relate the values of WGS to the goals of Open Access in order to see the relationship between Open Access and other social justice movements studied and championed by WGS as a discipline.

Outcomes & Next Steps

- Well received by students
- Professor reduced cost of course materials for intro class
- Invited back to speak to WGS 120: Intro to WGS in Spring 2019
- Integrating Scholarly Communications into formal Information Literacy program
- Hiring a teaching librarian in Scholarly Communications to work with Research & Instruction on developing instruction sessions around issues in Scholarly Communications

Conclusion

High-level WGS students are a logical starting point for integrating issues of Scholarly Communications and social justice into an Information Literacy program to achieve critical information literacy skills.

Slide URL

cupola.gettysburg.edu/librarypubs/100/