

1-1-2016

Hemorrhage

Emily D. Pierce
Gettysburg College, emicadoo@yahoo.com
Class of 2018

Follow this and additional works at: <https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury>

 Part of the Poetry Commons

Share feedback about the accessibility of this item.

Pierce, Emily D. (2016) "Hemorrhage," The Mercury: Year 2016, Article 24.
Available at: <https://cupola.gettysburg.edu/mercury/vol2016/iss1/24>

This open access poetry is brought to you by The Cupola: Scholarship at Gettysburg College. It has been accepted for inclusion by an authorized administrator of The Cupola. For more information, please contact cupola@gettysburg.edu.

Hemorrhage

Author Bio

Emily Pierce is a writer by choice and a dreamer by design. She is a sophomore English major with a writing concentration, simultaneously pursuing a minor in Cinema and Media Studies. In the words of Lin-Manuel Miranda, "I wanna build something that's gonna outlive me."

Hemorrhage

Emily Pierce

I was thirteen
and they saved me,
one week after I'd faced my fear
of routine procedure
and hobbled away
whispering, "That wasn't so bad."

I was thirteen
and my mother did not cry
in front of me,
because when your daughter goes pale and insists she is fine but you know she is not fine , you can't let her see.

I was thirteen
and we were watching the ballet from our living room.
I tasted blood—
my blood—
so they cauterized me and took me under
and I remember saying,
"Mama, just so you know, Giselle dies at the end of act one."

I was thirteen—
was that all?—
and they saved me;
my voice sings on,
my spirit sighs,

and I am not Giselle,
for my heart beats a steady dance

even as you broke it, even if these pages drip red and I run to my mother's arms when you cross my mind;
please do not dance yourself to death for my sake.