Author Bio

JULIA CHIN is a sophomore English major with a Writing Concentration and a Music minor. She writes for The Gettysburgian, sings soprano for College Choir, and swing dances for herself—everyone should have the chance to laugh at the delightfully silly messes they become now and again. She is in love with words.

First Person Plural Nonexistent

JULIA CHIN

they tell me that my poems about you are too bitter,
that I paint my portraits with
the violent hand of an ex-lover.
I suppose that's what We
are now.
interesting, isn't it?
giving a label to We, as if there was ever any Us.
