Biographical Note

George S. Warthen was a professor of English at Gettysburg College from 1924 until his death in 1954. Born on September 25, 1900 in Salisbury, North Carolina, Warthen later moved to Virginia where he attending high school and college. After graduating from the University of Virginia (1921), Warthen taught at U of VA for three years before receiving a Masters from Harvard in 1924. Afterwards he began teaching at Gettysburg College as an Assistant Professor of English and became a full Professor in 1948 shortly after receiving his Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University in 1948. In addition to teaching English classes focusing on 17th and 18th Century literature, Warthen headed the English department and served on various faculty committees.

As part of his graduate work at Johns Hopkins University, Warthen wrote a dissertation entitled "A Study of the Rolliad" in 1947. The Rolliad was a series of satirical essays on English politics and government written by numerous authors that ran until 1812.

"Someone hit on the happy idea of a mock review of a mock epic, and thus Criticisms of the Rolliad began. The successive numbers of this production appeared, from time to time, in The Morning Herald, and won instantaneous popularity; when collected in book-form, they ran through twenty-two editions. Each number professed to be a commentary on a new epic that had just appeared. This mythical composition, The Rolliad, took its name from one of the chief butts of its wit, John Rolle, M.P. for Devonshire, whose stolid toryism had latterly found vent in an attempt to cough down Burke."
