Author Bio

Jessica Lee is a sophomore Environmental Studies major with a minor in Biology. She was born in Europe and has travelled extensively with her family, and at Gettysburg College she has continued to thoroughly enjoy meeting new people and exploring new places. Nature and the outdoors are her passion and she's happiest in the cold weather with her hiking boots and a warm coat! She was fortunate enough to travel to Colorado on an Environmental Science field course over the summer of 2010 with Professor Randy Wilson. The memories of that experience, and all her adventures, have been captured through photographs.
