You were a head of squirrels’ nests, with blackberry stained lips, half pursed in smile. I remember how you sang
    like a whippoorwill,
with your tongue pressed against your teeth so the sound of your breath formed a harsh whistle of heavy air.

Now, your back is to the cliff’s edge.
My arms pressed against your bare back, sticky summer skin stuck between stringy bathing suits.
Your feet placed carefully;
once step too far back,
    and you’d fall headlong into Hog’s Mouth,
the sensation of cold, spring water like so many needles pricking a thumb, only rapid and all over.

_The devil’s beating his wife_, you said off the cuff one afternoon, your rosebud lips forming the shadows of letters, when the sun was high and the rain was falling from a near cloudless sky.
I can’t shake this feeling—you got up one morning on the wrong side of the tracks, and I watched you fall from grace
    and out of my arms.
